

Blend of energy and calamity wins prize

The mix of old and new in Kogarah inspired Anne Rong's prize-winning picture. The Year 11 student from St George Girls High School won a Kogarah Council photo competition based on the Bright Futures, Better Lifestyle plan council hopes to bring in by 2020.

Anne said her entry was inspired by the diversity of the area around her.

"[The photo] blended the different and interconnected aspects of the Kogarah natural and build environments as well as the sense of community", Anne said. "There are lots of vibrant images and I combined them together, Kogarah is an energetic place with an aura of calamity. It's a blend of new and old".

She said she was surprised to be named a winner from 20 entrants who produced "really good entries".

All the photographic entries are on display in the Kogarah Library Town Square Foyer.

Caught in a fishy affair

AFTER 32 years operating successfully from its Bondi Beach location. The Fishy affair has recently relocated to a fully refurbished dining room at South Juniors, Kingsford.

Patrons will find a relaxed atmosphere in the modern and spacious setting, which is flooded with natural light and can cater for all types of functions for as many as 100 guests.

Live seafood offerings from the tank and the use of fresh Australian produce are what draw the diners in and, with a focus on affordable prices, make the Fishy Affair a popular option with families.

Chef of 20 years Costa Skamnidis specialises in sumptuous seafood which he believes should be cooked simply to bring out the natural flavours.

And while the restaurant caters for vegetarians on request Mr Skamnidis said the most popular dish on his menu remained the Hot and Cold seafood Platter for two which included a hot of grilles seafood along with lobster, freshly shucked oysters and king prawns.

Grilled, not fried, seafood offerings are what impresses diners most and the attraction doesn't stop there. Winter doesn't have to keep you indoors; here you can seat yourself outside under the heaters and kick back with a glass of Pierro Pino Grigio from the wine list.

Exceptional customer service is a priority at the Fish Affair, where you'll find plenty of enthusiasm from Staff.
