

Greece's leading academic and artist to launch new works in Australia

Esteemed Greek artist and academic, Dr Platon Alexiou will exhibit 40 new works for the first time in Perth and Sydney. The exhibition entitled Kastellorizo: from Ancient to Modern depicts the island of Kastellorizo, Greece's most eastern Aegean island.

Dr Alexiou was commissioned by the Australian Friends of Kastellorizo as part of its youth and cultural program to paint historical perspectives of Kastellorizo for a new children's book in Greek and English to be launched in 2010.

Historian and artist Dr Platon Alexiou said he was inspired by the sea, the culture and the history of Kastellorizo.

"Despite being such a tiny and remote island, it had a great civilization unique in the Greek region. These works celebrate that, but they also bring it to life to spark the imagination and remind people of what things were really like," Dr Platon Alexiou said.

Kastellorizo is a tiny, 9.8 square kilometre island in Greece where some 150,000 Australians have their ancestral roots. Migration to Australia from the island began in the mid 19th century with the first Kastellorizian arriving in Perth in 1890.

Kastellorizo is unique in its location off the coast of Turkey, where east meets west. Famous ancient Greek heroes such as Achilles and Hercules passed nearby on their way to the Trojan War. Kastellorizo has been occupied by Dorians, Romans, Spaniards, Venetians, Ottomans, Italians, French and Britons.

"As an art historian and modern painter I believe that there is no present without the past. The past has always been a source of inspiration and education for whatever is created in modern times," Dr Alexiou said.

"We need to learn the stories of the past, because it helps us to know ourselves, and to learn from the progress of history. Art is as important as writing and story telling in recording events and places in time."
