

Greek guys too soppy to fully satisfy woman

In a poll conducted by OnePoll.com, the Germans were voted as the poorest when it comes to making love. And they were branded too smelly to be a hit between the sheets.

English men followed them and were tagged so lazy that they made women do all the work.

Sweden men came third and were blamed for being "too quick to finish."

Opinions of 15,000 globetrotters were taken for the poll. "Well-travelled lovers have named and shamed those blokes who don't satisfy them between the sheets," The Sun quoted a spokesperson for pollsters OnePoll.com as saying.

"These results are an eye-opener for thousands of men around the world and female travellers might judge potential new lovers by looking at these results." And because English lads fared pretty badly, they need to up their game if they want to be popular on the international scene," the rep added.

Others in the list were men from Holland who were called "too rough" apart from Americans were said to be "too dominating". Also, Greek guys were allegedly too soppy to fully satisfy a woman.

Scotland, Turkey (too sweaty) and Wales (too selfish) also featured in the list.

Russian men found the tenth place and were blamed for being too hairy for the average woman.

Greek songstress Peggy Zina & singer Kostas Karafotis in South Africa

Emperors Palace will host the sensational Greek songstress Peggy Zina and singer Kostas Karafotis at their first duet concert in South Africa on 10 October.

While the performers have collaborated numerous times in the past, Kostas Karafotis' first live collaboration was with Peggy Zina and Nino during the winter of 2004-2005 at the Apollo club in Greece. The two worked together again for a second season during the winter 2005 - 2006 at Diogenis Studio, until that Easter when he signed up for his new collaboration with Stamatis Gonidis for the summer of 2006.

Peggy Zina's commercial success can be attributed to her fine folk voice and popular appeal. She has worked with many well-known Greek singers, including Paschalis Terzis, Notis S-fakianakis, Antonis Remos, Stelios Roccas, Sakis Rouvas, Yannis Ploutarchos and Nikos Kourkoulis. An artist with two platinum-selling albums, Peggy has more than nine albums under her belt and in 2008 released a Best of Peggy Zina DVD.

Kostas Karafotis started his music career in March 2005; and it was then that the qualified medical doctor worked with one of Greece's most important composers, Antonis Vardis, who helped produce his first album, Ime etho - I am here, comprising 11 sensational songs. Thereafter Kostas' musical career has soared. He has released two more commercially successful albums after his first in 2005, performing in all of Greece's major cities and touring around the world.

The two singers bring their distinct vocals to every song that they perform; with Kostas' rough-hewed voice complimenting Peggy's silky vocals fans can look forward to a sizzling hot performance.

The exclusive gala concert will take place in the Centre Court at Emperors Palace and will include a sumptuous three-course meal.

Alcohol behind 5,000 Greek deaths a year

Illnesses caused by heavy drinking claim the lives of about 5,000 Greeks each year, according to figures released yesterday ahead of a conference in Thessaloniki next week on the dangers of alcohol.

The Greek Society for the Study of Addictive Substances, on whose behalf the survey was carried out, also said that statistics showed that some 200,000 people in Greece are alcoholics.

Even though this indicates that there is plenty of heavy drinking in the country, Greeks are by no means Europe's heaviest drinkers. The average Greek drinks 9.5 liters of pure alcohol every year. In comparison, the average European throws back 11 liters, which equates to 1,400 small bottles of beer per year.

However, the new survey shows that 30 percent of Greek teenagers drink spirits more than 20 times a year.

Mum's death rocks Alex Dimitriades and family

ACTOR ALEX Dimitriades has rushed home to Australia from a foreign film set to be with his family following the death of his mother.

The actor has spent recent weeks on the Greek island of Mykonos filming The Wog Boy sequel The King of Mykonos. However, following the deterioration of his mother Betty's condition last week, the actor took an immediate leave of absence. Betty has been suffering for a long time from an unspecified illness and it was the call Dimitriades, star of the feature film Head On and Underbelly, had been dreading.

Yesterday Dimitriades, 35, joined an intimate group of family and friends at a funeral service for his mother at Eastern Suburbs Memorial Park Matraville.

Sources say the actor was devoted to his mother, who had separated from his father when he was young. In May last year, following a drink driving charge, the actor's lawyer defended his client's driving record by telling a court that Dimitriades (pictured) was supporting his mother by driving her to hospital as she embarked on a "prolonged course of significant medical treatment".

He was subsequently allowed to keep his licence and placed on a good-behaviour bond.

The actor has spent recent days being comforted by siblings George and Melissa and an exotic and attentive girlfriend.

Dimitriades has been cast as Mihali, a smooth talking, immaculately dressed Mykonos mogul in the Wogboys sequel.