“WOODEN KOUTALA” BOUND FOR WHICH GREEK CLUB?

According to the Football NSW website, “The Berries have already clinched the wooden spoon for 2010”.

But this is not entirely correct just yet...

Mathematically, the “wooden k-outala” in 2010 can still go to one of two clubs only now- either Sydney Olympic or the West Sydney Berries.

Sure the Berries MUST win their next two games and Olympic LOSE both, but the Berries’ woeful goal-difference ensures they still remain the hot favourites to remain rock-bottom last.

You all know the drill by now...

Worst attack, worst defence, worst goal-difference...

They have remained stuck on two wins for ages- since round 6 to be exact, in one of the worst NSWPL performances by any club ever.

And poor Steve Karavatakis must be pulling his hair out wondering what he’s got to do to record his first win at the club!

The club looks set to be relegated.

What a shame...

After such an epic battle- and very, very hard work to get the club back into the Premier League three years ago...

MASS PLAYER EXODUS NEXT...

It won’t take long either before the MASS EXODUS of players from the Berries begins in earnest next...

Many players look set to continue their careers elsewhere.

But the two teams in particular I feel MOST SORRY for are the club’s U/13’s and U/14’s who will now also be looking elsewhere to continue their Premier Youth League careers.

What a pity...

What a tragedy for the Berries- a real tragedy!

THIS IS THE VERY REASON why Premier League football is so vital to a club’s existence- as the Berries will find out if they are relegated for season 2011.

WIN 13 FOR THE EAGLES

The Parramatta Eagles in the meantime have recorded their 13th win of the Super League season- a vital win which sees them extend their lead to EIGHT points now.

A vital win which sees them move a step closer to the Minor Premiership and also to NSW Premier League football in 2011.

The Eagles have been in this position before- and their clash against the Northern Tigers tomorrow could very well decide their fate.

WAKE UP OLYMPIC!

What a fall from grace for Sydney Olympic too...

Yes they should survive in 2010, but one sincerely hopes that they will begin to plan for 2011 IMMEDIATELY the final whistle blows in round 22.

2010 should be a real ‘wake-up’ call for them.

They have slipped back to second-last spot yet again.

Is there any wonder why its strong supporter-base has dwindled away in recent years?

WRONG VISION... WRONG APPOINTMENTS...

Let’s hope the right foundations are laid right here and right NOW- and well before season 2011 arrives. Beginning with the IMMEDIATE appointment of Peter Tsekenis & Peter Papoythis as 1st Grade coaches.

FROM LAST TO THE “TOP 5”!

Too many injuries...

Suspensions...

No luck....

Blah, blah, blah...

Perhaps they should have a good hard look at all the other clubs- in particular the Apia Leichhardt Tigers’ starting lineup last weekend against the Berries...

Missing from their ranks were quality players such as David D’Apuzzo, Hiro Moriyasu, Michael West, Paul O’Grady, Martin Vass and their ace striker Robbie Younis...

You didn’t hear the Tigers whinge and complain about injuries, suspensions nor luck along the way did you?

Astonishingly, the Tigers were LAST on the ladder near the HALF WAY STAGE of this year’s competition (Round 9)- but they didn’t complain.

They regrouped.

They reassessed.

And they redirected their ship.

What an incredible transformation followed!

The difference in the end against the Berries was the Tigers, with their two (yes 2!) young 1st Grade debutants, namely David Dascal and Andrew Virtuucci, still managed to grab all the points on the day- and in doing so, they have unbelievably turned their season right around and have become serious finals contenders!

They look set to grab a “Top 5” spot for sure thanks to their Berries’ win.

But can you imagine them searching for a “Top 3” spot now?

The audacity of them!

Who would EVER have thought it possible!

CLUB CHAMPIONSHIP (after Round 20):

The Club Championship will ultimately determine which club is to be relegated at the end of the season.

That honour will DEFINITELY be bestowed upon the Berries. With just two rounds to go, there are a total of 48 points on offer to the Berries- and they are exactly 47 points away from second-last Rockdale City.

They are GONE!
