

LIBERAL PARTY CAN'T BE TRUSTED ON HEALTH:

Barry O'Farrell wants to rip $5.5 billion out of NSW Health System

Barry O'Farrell and the NSW Liberal Party have put $16.4 billion in national health and hospital funding at risk because they are refusing to sign up to the COAG health reforms, Premier Keneally said today.

All Labor and Liberal Premiers around Australia have agreed to the Commonwealth funding part of each State's public health system. This is because rising health costs will become unsustainable for States in the future unless the Commonwealth Government provides funding. NSW will receive almost $5.5 billion – and this is all at risk from Barry O'Farrell and the Liberal Party who are refusing to say if they will sign up to the deal.

“Barry O'Farrell and the NSW Liberals have refused to say whether they will stand in the way of the COAG deal and refuse $5.5 billion extra funding for the NSW health system,” Ms Keneally said.

“What kind of leader would Barry O'Farrell make if he wants to refuse $5.5 billion for patients in the NSW health system?”

“This is cutting funding directly from the patients in our hospitals, extra health services and worst of all, 488 hospital beds.

“Barry O'Farrell is trying to avoid telling you his plans – but what we have seen so far will hurt NSW families.

“People should now ask themselves: what would Barry's agenda of chaos and conflict really mean for me and my family?”

Hospitals that could lose funding for beds if Barry O'Farrell refuses additional Commonwealth funding for
