Doting father John Arvanitellis with his wife Connie and children James and Myra.

Kingsgrove's John Arvanitellis is a devoted dad

DEVOTED dad John Arvanitellis works long hours, but he still finds plenty of time for his wife and children.

The Kingsgrove father of two, who is the latest entrant for the NSW Community Father of the Year Award, was nominated by his partner, Connie, in recognition of his tireless dedication to his family.

“In any spare moment he has he will make sure his children are involved,” she said. “That’s a big thing to kids, they want their fathers around all the time.”

Mr Arvanitellis, 36, who starts work at 5am and gets home up to 13 hours later, said a good dad would provide for his children but also be there for them as they grow.

“I come home from work, play with the kids, have dinner and a shower, have a play again and then send them off to sleep,” he said. “On the weekend I take my daughter to dancing and then I take my son to the park while we wait for her to finish dancing. Then we watch movies while we wait for Connie to come back from work.”

Nominations for the Father of the Year Award are open until August 6.

To download a nomination form go to theexpress.com.au and click on the Father of the Year links. Alternatively, send your entry to Father of the Year, The Express, The Reilly Centre, 387 Hume Highway, Liverpool 2170. The first 150 nominations will receive a $10 Darrell Lea gift voucher.

HELLSOC PRESENTS

“Food for Thought”

On Wednesday, August 3rd, we, the UNSW Hellenic Society, will be attempting to host our first-ever philosophical forum/academic night. The event, “Food for Thought”, will take place from 7pm-9pm and will consist of three presentations from key speakers with expertise in the fields of economics, finance/politics and anthropology/history.

The primary target of the event will be to bring to the forefront many of the underlying issues underpinning Greece and Cyprus in 2011, as well as seeking to provide answers to the challenges Greece faces through discussion. As this is an open invitation, please feel free to pass it on internally within staff and personally to anybody that you believe may find academic discussion on contemporary Hellas of interest. If you would like to further advertise the event, we would greatly appreciate it!

We will be serving canapes and a bar will be available; we will also have light entertainment so please join us for what we hope to be a fulfilling night!

Parking is available on campus and there is no attendance fee; an RSVP would be appreciated as we must accommodate seating. More information is available on our facebook event page:

Please feel free to invite as many/relatives/colleagues as you’d like, or anyone regardless of age that may find this of interest.

Thanks and we look forward to seeing you there!
