Life-size reconstruction of Athenian Trireme OLYMPIAS

Scale model of the full size operating replica of the Athenian trireme OLYMPIAS 5th century BC, commissioned into the Greek Navy in 1987.

Triremes were the standard warship of the ancient Mediterranean world for nine hundred years from the 5th BC to the 4th AD. Triremes had three banks (remes) of rowers on each side, hence the name. 170 rowers were required, in addition there was a flute player to keep them in time, 10 sailors and 5 officers. The metal ram (rostrum) at the bow of the trireme was the primary weapon used to disable and sink enemy ships. The complement of soldiers on board was quite small, 10 armoured spearmen (hoplites) and 4 archers. In its sea trials OLYMPIAS proved fast and highly maneuverable attaining a speed of 17km per hour and able to perform a 180 degree turn within one minute. The OLYMPIAS is on loan from the Hellenic Maritime Museum and will be on display at the Australian National Maritime Museum in conjunction with the exhibition Escape from Pompeii - The Untold Roman Rescue, from the end of March until the end of August 2017. All this has been made possible with the kind support of the following "Friends of the Trireme".
