my teams to play the way they do I think about one of my idols growing up being Paul Trimboli, this was a player I was in awe of us because he was able to find solutions purely based out of technical quality in combination with insight and hence I always liked players who showed high technical competence and were creative. Lastly, my main driving forces today are my Mother and Brother who have supported me like only a family can and always backed me no matter what decision I made, I want to keep making them proud along my journey.

Every day the expectations are to work to world class standards, this is something I've always embraced no matter what environment I've been part of so the main part for me was to come in and bring a high work ethic, an open mind, passion and initiative.

MS: How do you rate the coaching standard and systems in Australia?

AP - This is a difficult question to answer as over the last 8 years I have only spent around 3 years based in Australia, so in the end I guess the most simplistic way to assess a coaching competency anywhere is to watch the team of any coach and try identify the consistency and application of the principles the team utilises if your privy to know them. I guess the quality of your work is there for
